

BIG RECEPTION IS GIVEN FOR BLIND

Kenyon Hotel Parlor Are Scene of Social and Philanthropic Gathering.

Culture and fashion, with a seeing and observant eye, mingled with those of the darkened world yesterday afternoon, and were envious of the enthusiasm of the fingers and the keen mind strengthened through the very loss of what the seeing regard as most precious.

The occasion was the annual reception given in honor of the blind by the auxiliary of the reading room for the blind. For several hours the main parlor of the Kenyon hotel was thronged with hostesses and guests who attended to do honor to those who, though living in the shadows, are yet apparently the most talented and the most cheerful under the lot.

The interest attaching to the wide-spreading thought for the adult blind was reflected in the attendance at yesterday's reception, and, although it might seem contradictory, the affair was one of the jolliest, happiest and most pretentious of social events. Fashionably gowned women gave a picture coloring to the affair, in the midst of which the twenty or more of the sightless took their part and were lost to the scrutiny of the curious looking for the blind, until pointed out by the blind themselves, took a prominent part in the reception, showing much of their handiwork, and presenting a varied program, consisting of musical selections, readings, recitations and vocal selections.

To even those actively interested in the work of the blind the exhibit of their handiwork was a surprise. Scattered about on tables were shown shawls, soft pillows, babies' hoods and bonnets, slippers, stockings, kimono work, and with their delicate colorings and insertions of ribbons and perfection of work combining all the qualities of art.

Variety Is Shown.

These displays formed the work of fingers unassisted by the eyes, and represented the talents of Miss Marie Hansen, Mrs. Emma Hansen, and Miss Marie Hansen. The exhibition challenged the belief that the work had been performed by the blind. There was an exhibit of work, too, done on the typewriter by G. W. Simpson, that in its neatness and accuracy would put to shame many of the graduates of schools.

Another table showed the methods of teaching the blind to read and write under the Braille system.

During the afternoon the orchestra, composed of Albert Freeman, first violin; G. W. Timpon, second violin; John Fowler, pianist, rendered several selections. Mrs. Emma Hansen, in charming voice, gave a reading. Mr. Timpon also gave a recitation.

Following the program, Mrs. Arthur Bird, chairman of the auxiliary, reviewed the work of the society and the success attained by the blind in the learning of handicraft. Refreshments were served in the hotel cafe, and the blind made to realize through the afternoon that they were the guests of the occasion.

During the afternoon a telegram was received from Mrs. A. S. Rowan at San Francisco, the organizer of the auxiliary, and who maintains her interest in the local society, congratulating the members and expressing her regret at not being able to be in attendance.

HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Many Celestials Apply to Local Immigration Inspector for Return Passports.

Applications for papers allowing them to visit their native land and return to the United States have been filed by thirteen Chinese with the local immigration office, and as far as the investigations have been taken up, there have been no refusals. Most of the applicants live in Salt Lake and nearby mining camps, with two or three hailing from southern Idaho and southwestern Wyoming.

The approach of the Chinese New Year celebration always brings a longing for home to the Celestials, and those who are able to meet the government requirements usually try to leave in time to spend their great holiday season in their native land.

Immigration laws since the Chinese exclusion act, provide that a Chinaman, in order to return to the United States, must unravel a skein of red tape designed to prevent the homesick Celestial from going home and sending a "proxy" back to the United States. This regulation is to the effect that he must qualify in any one of five ways by showing that he has in the United States a wife, child or parent, or that he has property of ownership of a business, or that he has in the United States a certain amount of the cash in the bank.

Most of the Celestials who apply to C. J. Hist, the local inspector, qualify through the property clause by furnishing proof of ownership of a business, or that he has in the United States a certain amount of the cash in the bank.

Several within the last few weeks have been accompanied to local banks, where they have shown their deposits of $1,000 or more, while others have brought men to the inspector who have declared under oath that they own the applicant sums aggregating $1,000. The "man of family" qualification is probably the least used at the local office.

Investigation is made by the inspector before papers are issued, but if at any time after the Celestial leaves for home it is discovered that he has made false reports, he can be prevented from re-entering the country. In cases of Chinamen of the better class this investigation is no more rigid than is required by law, and in cases where a Chinaman produces a friend who says he borrowed $1,000 from the applicant some time ago and intends to pay it back, it is difficult to prove otherwise, although the story may sound far fetched. In cases where the property qualification is used, the property or cash must be in the applicant's name when he returns to the United States.

To successful applicants, passports are made out and the papers must bear a photograph of the applicant and other means of positive identification.

VAGRANTS ARE SHY OF COIN OF THE REALM

Only 50 cents could be found in a search of the pockets of forty vagrants arrested yesterday in the street in the district north of the city. They were young men between 20 and 30 years of age, comparatively well dressed and well kept, and came to Salt Lake from outside points after either giving up or losing work.
